One Other Very Badly Injured

Battle Creek Man Is County's Fifth Traffic Fatality Of 1959

A traffic collision between a pickup truck and a passenger car about a mile and a half south of Frederic on US-27 last Friday afternoon raised the county's traffic death toll for 1959 to five and left another person very severely injured.

Dwaine Metcalfe, 45, of Battle Creek, a passenger in the pickup truck, was the death victim while Mrs. Patricia Fizzell, 22, a passenger in the automobile, was very severely injured sustaining compound fractures of the skull and both arms.

The accident occurred, Crawford County's traffic officer, J. W. Justus, said, on the highway south of the Grayling State Police Post where the pickup truck headed south and driven by Donald E. Gooding, 27, of Corunna went out of control and crashed with a northbound car driven by Roland G. Fizzell, 22, of Flint. Both drivers were taken to Grayling Mercy Hospital for treatment and released.

Mrs. Fizzell is still a patient at the hospital. The body of the victim was taken back to Battle Creek where funeral arrangements were being made.

Roland Barrett, 52, was arrested a week ago Monday in Frederic on charges of being drunk and disorderly by Deputy Sheriff Art Clough. Barrett appeared before Justice of the Peace Olin Williamson late last week where he entered a plea of guilty to the charge. Justus said Barrett levied a fine and costs of $32.95 which Barrett paid rather than face an alternative of 30 days in jail.

COUNTY SCHOOLS CLOSE FOR THANKSGIVING

All Crawford County schools will be closed this coming Thursday and Friday for the Thanksgiving holiday. There will be a full day of school on Wednesday of this week, and classes will resume at 9 o'clock Monday morning, November 30th.

Frederic Eagles Open Season Next Tuesday

The Frederic Eagles will open their basketball season at Hale on December 1st. This is the first time these two schools have met in basketball competition. Four starters from last season are back this year to try to improve on the 11-7 record of last year.

Bill Johnson, senior, who was an all conference selection in his sophomore and junior years, is expected to be a good steady influence on the squad as well as continuing his good scoring. Bill averaged 14.3 points per game last season. Jack Smith, junior, was an honorable mention selection as a sophomore, averaged 10 points and should score better this year if he can cut down on his fouls. Ron Mertles, junior, and Ben Redman, sophomore, both have a year of varsity experience and should provide a good solid backcourt combination. Mitch Thompson and Ben Pratt, up from the reserves, are coming along good and are expected to be big help in replacing Steve Olson who was lost by graduation. Bob Midkiff and Dick Barclay, seniors, and Gerry Gabriel and Fred Allen will probably round out the varsity squad.

SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. ANNA HANSON

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna Kristine Hanson were held Saturday, November 21st, 1959, at 2 o'clock at the Grayling Evangelical Lutheran church, with the Rev. Harold Knudsen officiating. She passed away suddenly at Mercy Hospital on November 16th, after about four years of ill health. Music was given by Mrs. Floyd S. Carter, who accompanied Mrs. Robert Sorenson, Mrs. Elise Rasmussen, Mrs. Wilhelm Raase and Mrs. Vern Otter as the choir. Interment was in Elmwood cemetery with Pastor A. L. Johnson, Walter Hemmingsen, Leo Jorgensen, Holger Hanson, Harold MacNeven, A. J. Nelson, A. L. Roberts and Sam Rasmussen serving as pallbearers.

Born August 11, 1902 to Mr. and Mrs. Christian Peterson in Grayling, this was her lifetime home. After finishing her schooling, Mrs. Hanson worked for several years as a linotypist at the Avalanche office, and for a couple of years at the Grayling newspaper. She was married May 16, 1926, to Alfred Hanson, in Grayling. She assisted at the Avalanche again during World War II.

A member of the Danish Sisterhood, she also belonged to the American Legion Auxiliary No. 106, and the Women's Benefit Association.

Surviving besides her husband are three brothers, T. P. Peterson and Adolph Peterson of Grayling, and Gus Peterson of Marquette, also several nieces and nephews.

Here to attend the services from out-of-town were Thorvald Peterson of Green Bay, Wis., Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sherman and daughter Lynn of Flint, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Martin and daughter Sara and Mary of Lansing, Viggo Mikkelsen and son Norman, and William Pratt, all of Detroit, Gerald Herrick of Mt. Pleasant, Mr. and Mrs. John Stephan of Traverse City, and Mrs. E. A. Cole and daughter Sally of Marquette.

Miss Jackie Randall and Mrs. Jackie Jones spent last Friday with their respective parents in Pontiac.

Local Population Gaining In Stature

(Special to the Avalanche) New York, Nov. 19 — The new generations of Crawford County residents are rising to greater heights physically, at least — than earlier generations did. Men, women and children locally are growing taller all the time.

Way back in 1910, nearly fifty years ago, when the county population was only 3,934, men grew to an average height of five feet seven inches and women to five feet two inches.

Things are much different today. According to the 1959 yearbook of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, studies of physical characteristics on a national basis show that modern man, at the age of 25, is some two inches taller than was his grandfather and about one inch taller than his father was at the same age.

Women have made similar gains. States the report, since grandma's day, they have added two inches to their height. Today's typical woman is five feet four at age 25. Crawford County's present population, which is 25 percent larger than it was in 1910, numerically, is also more than three percent taller than it was then, applying the average national change locally.

Supporting the Agriculture Department's figures are the findings of the military services in World Wars I and II and various actuarial studies.

If the growth in number locally is combined with the growth in size, it means that there is much more to the present Crawford County population than is indicated by a mere head count.

Stretched out along a straight line, local folk, it would seem, are a distance of 4.8 miles, compared with 3.7 miles that would have been needed by the 1910 population.

To carry the statistical fantasy one step further, were the extra inches of height that are being sported by present-day residents of the county taken away and used to assemble additional people, there would be enough available for some 158 men and women of 1910 stature.

What has caused this physical growth? The Agriculture Department says it is the result of better control of childhood diseases, of better knowledge of nutrition, of the wider variety of foods in use and of better living conditions generally.

Lansing — The U. S. Bureau of Public Roads has allocated $7,538,744 for use by Michigan on its secondary roads during the 1960-61 fiscal year. Highway Commissioner John C. Mackie has announced.

This amount represents a decrease of about two per cent compared to the amount of federal aid apportioned for Michigan during the fiscal year ending next June 30. Mackie said.

Of the money allocated for Michigan in 1960-61, the State Highway Department will keep $2,981,553 for work on the state's secondary road system while the remaining $4,444,110 will be divided among the state's 83 counties. Crawford County will receive $27,035.

The money is apportioned to the counties on the basis of land area, population and road mileage.

These funds must be matched by the state and county road commission on a 50-50 basis and may be used for construction purposes only, the Highway Commissioner said.

Attention Kids... PARENTS TOO!

Santa Claus was in the Avalanche office today and asked us to remind you to sign your last name as well as your first when you mail your letter to him at his mail box on Michigan Ave., in downtown Grayling.

He would appreciate it too if you or your mother would would put your address on your letter. That way he can answer you right away. Of course, Santa knows where every boy and girl lives but when it gets this time of the year, he is ever so busy and it takes valuable time for him to remember your last name and where you live. If you write it down for him, it will give him extra time to get that everything is in readiness for Christmas Eve and his big delivery job.

Your Job Didn't Just Happen . . .

That statement opens an important study, "Investment for Jobs," recently made by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. It deals with such momentous matters as the number of jobs that must be created in coming years, the investment that will be necessary, the advantages and disadvantages of various means of financing job-creating industrial undertakings, and the problems that must be faced.

The need is a formidable one. In late years, the labor force has been increasing at the rate of 880,000 a year. This trend, say the estimates, is destined to continue, reaching the 1,820,000-a-year point in the 1975-1980 period. And in the immediate years ahead, there will be a net increase of a million young people annually.

To provide all these jobs, and to expand the gross national product to desired future levels, will require a huge investment. "According to the booklet, plant and equipment expenditures (valued at 1958 prices) ran around $20 billion a year just before World War II. They have averaged $40 billion since 1950. And the requirement by 1970 will be a staggering $70 billion a year.

The booklet makes a point that is obvious enough, but seems to be frequently ignored—"the creation of new job opportunities depends on the opportunities for profitable enterprises that can attract and hold the financial support of willing and able investors, investors who are free to invest or not." And the amount of money needed to create just one job has grown tremendously over the years. The sum, of course, varies very widely from industry to industry, but the average is believed to be about $15,000. Thus, the labor force grows by one million a year, we must have an investment of $15 billion just to keep from going backward. And even that is not the end of the matter. Additional millions are needed to provide new jobs for workers available due to growth in efficiency. New investment also is needed to provide employment for workers in industries which are declining. A current example, the booklet says, is radio, due to the inroads of television.

The booklet goes into considerable detail as to the various ways of raising investment capital. One is debt financing through, for instance, the issuance of bonds. A problem here is that a heavy burden of debt makes for rigidity in an enterprise—the obligation must be met, whether or not profits are earned. So it says this: "Emphatically stated, ample provision of risk-taking venture capital is an essential requisite of a vigorous, expanding economy. An increasing proportion of equity investment (that is, common stock investment) as compared to debt financing lessens our vulnerability to down-spiraling recession."

At the end the Chamber presents a list of needs which it believes should be supported with positive action. These include among others: More workable labor laws conducive to industrial peace and efficiency; less onerous regulation of business; elimination of unfair government competition with business; reduced government spending; lowering of progressive income tax rates in order to stimulate the growth of risk capital and more equity financing; reduction of the capital gains tax.

To sum up, jobs just don't come automatically into being because people want them. They come, in large part, because people with the means and the inclination to invest see a chance to make a profit. The economic climate, therefore, is the all-important thing—and the economic climate of coming years will pretty much decide whether job opportunities are equal to job demands.

Interesting Events In Grayling 23 Years Ago

INTERESTING ITEMS OF NEWS GATHERED FROM THE FILES OF THE AVALANCHE OF 23 YEARS AGO

November 26, 1936

Characteristic of the Grayling High School spirit, the fighting Green and White put everything they possessed into the game Friday night, although losing to the veteran Kalamazoo squad by a score of 19-18.

The dedication of the new school gymnasium at Grayling will take place on December 24th. The gymnasium is 92 x 120 feet and is built of cobblestone, finished on the inside in tile. It is very elaborate and beautiful and we expect it to serve many purposes, including the district tournament.

The Grayling have come back to the AuSable River here, but they're not the original Michigan species now nearly extinct. The Department of Conservation has "reintroduced" 2000 Montana grayling fingerlings from the Wolf Lake hatchery near Kalamazoo to the Grayling hatchery where they may be seen by visitors. The fingerlings will be used for the first time at this hatchery in propagation experiments. Some authorities insist that the Michigan grayling and the Montana grayling are scientifically indistinguishable. Five thousand Montana grayling have been planted in Ford Lake, one of the pot-hole lakes in the Pigeon River state forest northeast of Grayling from which all forms of fish life were removed by the Institute for Fisheries Research early this fall. Since the grayling are protected the year around, this lake will be posted against public fishing.

A total of 205,800,000 wall-eyed pike fry have been planted this year by the department of conservation.

The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly. You can hunt till you are dizzy, but it somehow will get by. Till the forms are off the presses it is strange how still it keeps. It shrinks down into a corner and it never stirs or peeps. That typographical error, most too small for human eyes, till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to double size. The boss, he stares in horror then he grabs his hair and groans. The copy reader drops his head up on his hand and moans. The remainder of the issue may be clean as clean can be, but that typographical error is the only thing we see.

Eight bull elk, a fox and a coyote were seen when CCC enrollees of Veterans' Camp Pigeon River made a deer census drive in four square sections of the Pigeon River State Forest last week in addition to approximately 120 deer. Another census drive will be conducted following the close of the open deer season to determine the approximate number of deer taken by hunters in the area.

AMERICAN

Clubs to 500

The city of Akron, Ohio has been a transportation, manufacturing and distribution center for more than 150 years. Its transportation history even antedates its founding. Before white men entered what became Northeast Ohio, the Portage Path was a famous Indian highway. Red men portaged their canoes from the Cuyahoga River, in the Lake Erie watershed over the divide between the Tuscarawas River, in the Ohio River watershed. At one time the Portage Path was the western boundary of the United States. Today it is a beautiful residential street.

Transportation and industry have built Akron from a sprawling village of 250 people to a city of nearly 300,000, the center of a metropolitan area of nearly half a million. From village water-powered plants came flour and corn meal, wool cloth and whiskey. Later, Akron turned to production of farm machinery and cereal. The first American oatmeal was made in Akron. The third manufacturing period came with the development of huge clay deposits and the production of pottery, sewer pipe and brick. And then came rubber. In 1870 Dr. Benjamin Franklin Goodrich started the company that bears his name, first producing fire hose and similar goods, then carriage tires and bicycle tires. Four of the five major rubber companies of the nation today direct the manufacturing, distribution, sales, financing and research of their far-flung and diversified activities from their Akron headquarters.

Located in Northeastern Ohio, Akron is the county seat of Summit County, which gets its name from the fact that the county straddles the continental divide between the Great Lakes and the Mississippi basin.

Crippled Children's Award to Bagwell

Sunday night in Howell, 10-year-old Ronnie Dinkel presented the Livingston County Crippled Children's Society achievement award to Paul D. Bagwell. Both Ronnie and Mr. Bagwell are crippled as a result of accidents. Mr. Bagwell received permanent injuries while playing football, after which he contracted polio. In spite of this he has become an outstanding teacher and civic leader. The achievement award is given annually at Easter to the crippled individual who has successfully overcome his physical condition and inspired others. Ronald Dinkel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Dinkel, 5341 East Grand River, performed an act of heroism when he pushed little Carol Sue Hasbrouck off his sled and went under a moving car alone. As a result he suffered permanent injury.

AuSable River System

By Charles L. Polinski

My home is in the heart of the AuSable River System and being an ardent trout fisherman, I am much interested in what the Michigan Conservation Department is doing with these particular waters.

A few years ago many trout fishermen saw those little white signs go up along the river banks which made certain parts of trout streams: All Fly Areas.

People have wondered what the Conservation Department's idea was behind all of this. Most of us knew that it was to improve trout fishing in some way; but how?

This list was made by the Fish and Fisheries Division of the Michigan Conservation Department.

"The North Branch of the AuSable River in Crawford County, most of the South Branch of the AuSable River, and a portion of the Main Stem in Crawford County are at present under a fly fishing, increased size limit regulation—9 inches on the North Branch and 10 inches on the South Branch and a portion of the Main Stem."

I got in touch with Mr. F. A. Westerman, Chief of Fish and Fisheries, and asked him many questions about these restricted fly fishing areas. Such as, what are these restricted areas for?

Mr. Westerman said, "This at present is largely in an experimental category along with portions of some other streams (a portion of the Little South Branch of the AuSable River, Newaygo County, and a portion of the Boardman River in Grand Traverse County, and a portion of the East Branch of the Fox River in Schoolcraft County) to test whether such regulations result in better fish management, basically undertaking to make fishing better."

Many trout fishermen feel that it has already helped make fishing better. It has cut down the heavy traffic on these waters and gives the trout a chance to build up. This results in larger trout being caught. They feel that the AuSable Main Stem should be put into an all-fly-fishing river. Because of this fact, I asked Mr. Westerman his opinion.

"It is my opinion that much of the AuSable River System justifies such a regulation, based on the experience we have had with it and the reaction of the anglers who have been the closest to it. On the other hand, I don't feel that the entire stream deserves to be placed under such a regulation."

"If the AuSable River does not become a completely restricted fly-fishing river, will there be any changes made in the other areas that already have?" I asked.

A good question is still present as to whether or not the existing orders should be extended to cover more of the stream, or whether they should be in any sense restricted in part. The answer to that question still lies in the future."

There are several people who complain about these restricted fly-fishing areas. They feel that when buying a fishing license and trout stamp they are entitled to fish with 'bait' anywhere they choose.

The claims made that such a regulation is discriminatory are unfounded. It simply defines a method under which the sport of angling can be carried on in these waters, which are somewhat more restrictive in character than on other trout waters of the state. And no one should lose sight of the fact that many hundreds, if not thousands, of miles of our smaller streams and some of the larger are in no sense suitable to be treated as fly waters only."

The Fish and Fisheries Division of the Michigan Conservation Department is doing many things to help keep trout fishing supreme in Michigan. For instance, placing trout into the AuSable River System which have had a certain fin or a gill-covering removed before being released.

By doing this, the Fish Division can keep track of where these particular trout have migrated to from where they were released. That is why they have those "information slips" at most landings and fishing sites. Upon catching a trout which has been marked, you should fill in the answers as to what species it is, how it is marked, and what landing or fishing site you were nearest when you caught it.

Each year the Fish Hatchery releases many thousands of trout of many species into the AuSable River System. I have visited the Grayling Fish Hatchery and seen many of these trout. Take last year as an example.

"Plantings in 1958 in the AuSable River System in Alcona, Crawford, Iosco, Montmorency, Ogemaw, Oscoda, and Roscommon Counties are as follows: Brook trout—18,250, legal size; brown trout—17,800, legal size; rainbow trout—50,050, legal size. A total of 87,100 legal size trout!"

Perhaps you think these 'legal size' trout as they are called are nothing but 7-10 inchers. No sir! I have seen trout being released at Smith Bridge that I would proudly display over my fireplace mantel. When the Fish Hatchery says they release legal size trout you can be sure that many of them will not have to be measured to see if they are 'legal size' or not."

Some fishermen say that hatchery trout do not hold a candle to the native trout. They say hatchery trout cannot put up as good a scrap, and have a hatchery taste and smell. I have waded many miles in the AuSable River System, caught hundreds of which I am sure was both native and hatchery trout, and do not believe trout had a foul unsavory taste.

True, some do have a slightly different taste, but not in all cases. I think that unsavory taste will only be found in trout that were in weakened conditions when confined.

Are these hatchery trout scrappier like the natives? I claimed at first they were not. But prejudice played a big hand in this. For, after becoming familiar with them and giving them a fair chance I began to feel that they are just as scrappy, if not, scrappier.

Although the native trout leads a rugged life in the rivers and streams, they do not have as good a diet as the hatchery trout. The natives eat what ever comes their way. The hatchery trout is raised on a diet that is made to produce a good strong fish.

Hatchery trout are started to feed with finely ground liver. After a few weeks, dried meals are added. Within a few months, they are on a dry diet in crumbles or pellet form.

From then on, meal consisting of liver, hearts, or spleens, may be fed once weekly, bi-weekly or less often, depending on the species of trout and the chemistry of the water in which they are held.

The dry diets consist largely of fish and cottonseed meal, middlings, dried skiff milk and yeast condensed fish and grain fermentation solubles and iodized salt in pellet form.

I asked Mr. Westerman what his opinion was as to whether the hatchery trout, or the native trout was the better fighter. Here are results of tests conducted by the Conservation Department.

Mr. Westerman says, "Some fishermen claim they can tell the difference. However, in a 1954 experiment, pairs of expert trout fishermen fished over confined wild and hatchery-reared trout. Each pair fished two days and were under constant observation. All trout taken were removed from the experiment."

It was determined unequivocally in this test that expert fishermen could not differentiate between fish of hatchery or wild origin while on the line. It was ascertained that the experts differentiated on the basis of weight rather than origin and consequently I persistently called the heavier, untrained hatchery fish natives."

Bow Hunters Association Backs Proposed Law Change

A proposal by the state Conservation Commission to allow archers to possess and transport strung bows in automobiles — providing the bows are enclosed in a case or carried in the car trunk — has been given the support of the Michigan Bow Hunters Association.

The Commission, at its November meeting, decided to ask the legislature for a change in the existing laws covering the transportation of bows. Presently, a bow must be unstrung and enclosed in a case when carried or possessed in a motor vehicle. The only alternative is carrying the bow unstrung in the trunk, where a case is not required.

According to Michigan Bow Hunters president Kenneth Hoffman, a handicap to the many archers who use quivers attached to their bows. Such a quiver makes stringing a bow difficult and often impossible unless it is removed. The law, adds Hoffman, also presents a hardship for women and youngsters who may not be capable of stringing their own weapon. And stringing a bow in cold-weather, he reminds, can be troublesome.

Allowing archers to carry their bows strung when locked in a trunk or when secured in a case would solve these problems, Hoffman said. He pointed out that firearms may be carried uncased in the trunk or inside the car when in a case without being broken down.

Michigan's bow encasement law has been in effect since 1907. It was sought by the Conservation Department, and had the backing of the Michigan Bow Hunters Association, in an effort to eliminate an undesirable element — including road hunters, others who hunted from atop moving cars or trucks and still others who used the bow for deer poaching — from the state's bowhunting ranks.

The law has been successful in accomplishing that aim. However, Conservation Department law-enforcement officials and the Michigan Bow Hunters have felt the restriction which demands that bows always be unstrung in a car is unnecessary.

This particular restriction was added by the legislature when the law was passed and not requested by conservation officials. Hoffman said he doubts its removal would result in any increase in the already small number of game law violations during the archery deer season.
